

which filaments can it run

Послан excalibur - 14.10.2021 09:57

Hey there,

I am interested in buying so i can run abbysal sites. I am wondering. Which filaments can the bot run for cruisers? and which one for frigates? And can it triplebox frigates or only singlebox?

Thanks for you help.

Good question re: Multiboxing. I don't believe it is capable of multiboxing (yet).

I use a max tank Gila for Agitated Gamma filaments. You can experiment with fits, but I generally find if I just use max tank, then I have no problems.

I use a dual shield extender Worm for calm filaments.

I STRONGLY recommend you sit and watch your bot for 1 hours of running before trying to leave it as AFK. How experienced are you with the Abyss? If you've not experience then, simply, don't buy this. You need to know how to identify errors, adjust your settings so slightly, notice the settings you've got wrong, and eventually you will come to have the right setup.

This advice comes after losing ~30 Gilas, 100+ Worms, countless other ships ... But you're welcome to try the same path as me and just assume an 8bn Gila will survive a Raging filament.

People don't run t3 cruisers in abyss typically. Better to just run a drone boat like worm or gila. For best isk/hr gila would be better. Just youtube some videos on gila fits and make sure your skills up to the task.

I think he means Tier, not Tech.

Personally, I am really enjoying Frigates in the Abyss and when I'm at the keyboard, 3 worms in the Agitated rooms is heaps of fun - if at times a little risky.

Generally, though, one worm per Calm is absolutely fine for Eve Pilot.

Today I will be testing the feature noted below on the same machine.

I am able to run T1 Electrical and Exotic using the worm just fine (as alpha)
I think with good skills, T2 should be OK, but haven't tried.

I didn't think tech 3 cruisers could even get into abyss?

Bot cannot use tech3 cruisers modes. Also I doubt they are good for abyss at all.
